

How to take a picture from your file and put it on a website

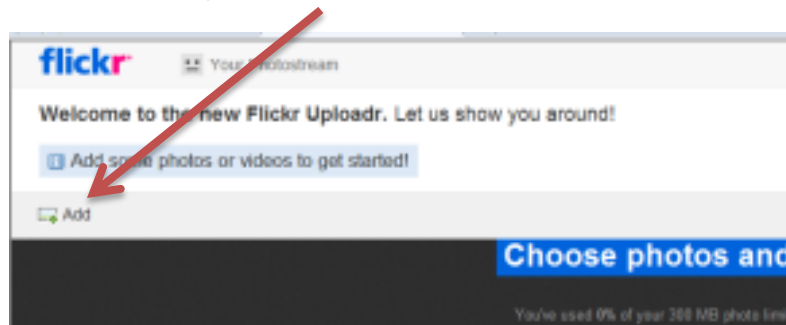

After you have successfully downloaded a picture from your camera you can put it on a website like Flickr.

Open up the site you're going to place your photo in. You will most likely need to have a sign in so you might have to create one. I'm going to use Flickr; you do need a log in.

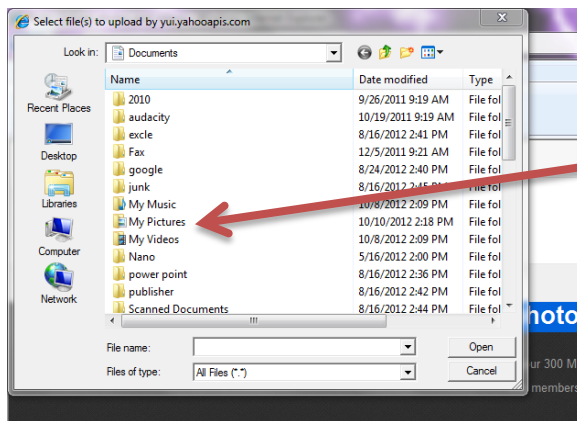

Click on upload.

It will open and look like this, click add.

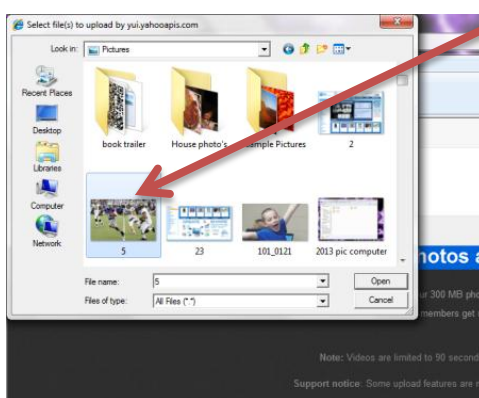

Then your file will open up and you can choose the picture or pictures you want.

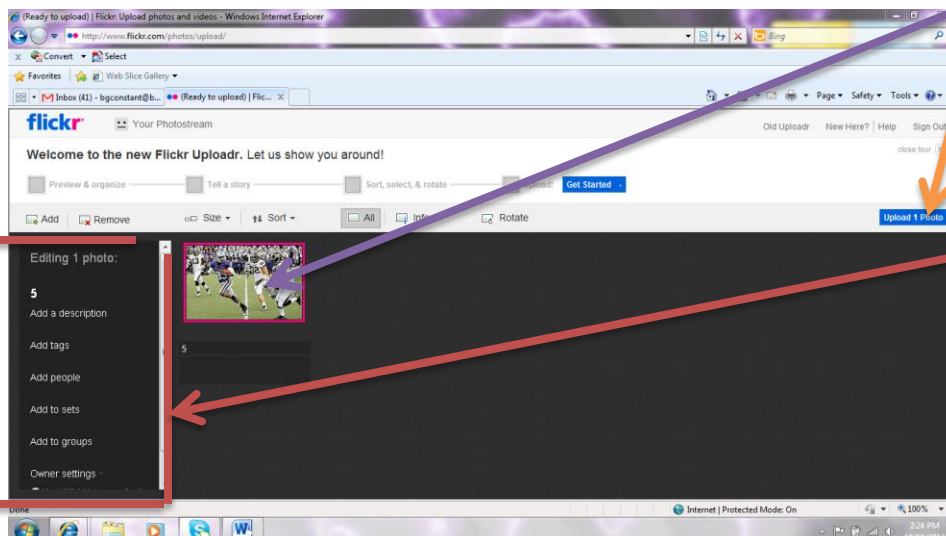

You probably saved it in pictures so click on it.

Next click on the picture you want and hit enter.

After you upload the screen should resemble this.

You can add a description you can add tags you can add to a group and there or thing you can do to the settings. You can also change the size and rotate it. Then when you're done click upload. You can also remove your photo, and add another photo
